This course considers sacred music in Western Europe and North America, beginning in the Renaissance Era and ending in the twenty-first century. We will discuss different works as case studies in relationships between music and its cultural, political, and religious contexts, using these works to examine the cultural and aesthetic priorities of specific times and places in history. We will also consider the concept of sacred music in a broad sense, examining how its definitions have changed over time.